IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
SAN JOSE DIVISION

WILLIAM E. FLEMING, NO. 5:11-cv-01830 EJD (PSG)
Plaintiff(s), ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO REMAND
v.
AC SQUARE, INC., [Docket Item No. 16]
Defendant(s).

Plaintiff William E. Fleming ("Plaintiff"), appearing pro se, filed the instant Motion to Remand this action back to the Superior Court from which it originated ("Motion"). Defendant AC Square, Inc. ("Defendant") opposes the request in written opposition. Having reviewed the written submissions for this matter, the court finds it suitable for decision without oral argument pursuant to Civil Local Rule 7-1(b). As such, the hearing scheduled for August 12, 2011, is vacated. The Motion will be denied for the reasons stated below.¹

I. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

For context, the court recites various allegations from Plaintiff's original complaint and First Amended Complaint ("FAC"). See Def.'s Request for Judicial Notice ("RJN"), at Exs. 1, 4. Plaintiff is a former employee of Defendant. On November 3, 2007, Plaintiff was demoted from his supervisory position without warning or reason. In response, Plaintiff, who is African-American, requested that Defendant place him in a comparable supervisory-level position. Although such a

1 position did become available soon after Plaintiff's request, it was given to a Hispanic employee 2 with less experience and ability. Plaintiff continued to work for Defendant after the demotion, but 3 experienced racial remarks from other employees. He eventually filed a formal complaint with the 4 Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ("EEOC") on January 2, 2008, and was eventually 5 laid-off on August 13, 2008. Plaintiff believes Defendant's actions were racially-motivated.

6 After the EEOC issued Plaintiff a right-to-sue notice, he commenced an action against 7 Defendant in Santa Clara County Superior Court on October 31, 2008. See RJN at Ex. 1. Defendant
8 eventually filed a Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings (see RJN at Ex. 2), which the Superior 9 Court granted on March 9, 2011. See RJN at Ex. 3. Plaintiff was allowed ten days within which to 10 file and serve an amended complaint. Id. He did so on March 17, 2011. See RJN at Ex. 4. Unlike 11 the original complaint which contained no statutory references, the FAC indicated Plaintiff was 12 seeking relief under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Id. In light of that amendment, 13 Defendant removed the action to this court on April 14, 2011. See Docket Item No. 1. This Motion 14 followed.

15 II. DISCUSSION

16 Before turning to the propriety of the removal which occurred here, the court must first 17 address two distinct issues. The first is Defendant's RJN. See Docket Item No. 25. The second is 18 Defendant's argument that the Motion must be dismissed due to certain procedural shortcomings.
19 As explained below, the former will be granted while the latter is rejected.

20 A. Judicial Notice

21 Pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 201, the court may take judicial notice of facts "not 22 subject to reasonable dispute in that it is either (1) generally known within the territorial jurisdiction 23 of the trial court or (2) capable of accurate and ready determination by resort to sources whose 24 accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned." Fed. R. Evid. 201(b). This includes documents filed in 25 state court proceedings. See Porter v. Ollison, 620 F.3d 952, 955 (9th Cir. 2010). A court "shall 26 take judicial notice if requested by a party and supplied with the necessary information." See Fed. R.
27 Evid. 201(d).

28 Here, Defendant requests the court take judicial notice of the following: (1) the original

1 complaint filed in the Superior Court on October 31, 2008; (2) Defendant's Notice of Motion and 2 Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings, filed in the Superior Court on February 9, 2011; (3) a 3 Superior Court order filed March 9, 2011, granting Defendant's Motion for Judgment on the 4 Pleadings; and (4) the FAC filed in the Superior Court on March 17, 2011. Plaintiff does not dispute 5 the authenticity of these documents. Since each document is judicially noticeable as a record filed in 6 the state court action underlying the instant proceeding, Defendant's RJN is granted in its entirety.

7 B. Procedural Defects

8 Defendant argues that the Motion's lack of a legal memorandum amounts to "substantial 9 prejudice" since, as Defendant puts it, it has been "left to largely guess as to the basis and grounds 10 for the requested relief." Defendant further contends this procedural defect alone requires denial of 11 the Motion. The court disagrees.

12 Despite Defendant's claim to the contrary, the state of the pleadings demonstrate that it has 13 not suffered prejudice, let alone substantial prejudice, from the absence of the memorandum
14 seemingly required by Local Civil Rules 7-2 and 7-4. See In re Telemart Ent., Inc., 524 F.2d 761, 15 766 (9th Cir. 1975) (stating that one party's noncompliance with local rules should not justify court 16 action if it does not cause prejudice to another party). With regard to Plaintiff's pleadings, the 17 Notice of Motion adequately describes Plaintiff's request for an order "remanding this action to the 18 Superior Court of the State of California, County of Santa Clara." See Docket Item No. 16. Plaintiff 19 also relies on a document entitled "Notice of Opposition to Removal to Federal Court" ("Notice of 20 Opposition"), which both responds factually to the statements contained in the Notice of Removal 21 and provides legal citation and argument. See Docket Item No. 15. For Defendant, its pleading in 22 opposition contains a coherent legal discussion which directly addresses the issues raised by 23 Plaintiff. Defendant was also able to discern the evidence necessary to support its position and 24 included such evidence in the RJN. From these observations, the court can only conclude that 25 Plaintiff's Motion and supporting papers provided sufficient notice of the relief requested as well as 26 the basis for such relief, to which Defendant formulated an appropriate rebuttal. Defendant did not 27 need to resort to guesswork to articulate an intelligent defense if it did so, even if Plaintiff's 28 pleadings contain information of minimal relevance to the remand issue.

1 Moreover, while the court recognizes that Plaintiff is “expected to abide by the rules of the 2 court in which he litigates” (Carter v. Comm'r of Internal Revenue, 784 F.2d 1006, 1008 (9th Cir.
 3 1986)), this responsibility must nonetheless be tempered by the policy to liberally construe
 4 procedural requirements for a pro se litigant such as Plaintiff. Abassi v. Immigration &
 5 Naturalization Serv., 305 F.3d 1028, 1032 (9th Cir. 2002). The court has done so here.
 6 Consequently, Defendant’s invitation to deny the Motion based solely on procedural defects is 7 declined.

8 C. Remand

9 The court now addresses Plaintiff’s remand request. Such an examination requires a review 10 of settled jurisdictional principles.

11 Federal removal jurisdiction is a creation of statute. See Libhart v. Santa Monica Dairy Co., 12 592 F.2d 1062, 1064 (9th Cir. 1979) (“The removal jurisdiction of the federal courts is derived 13 entirely from the statutory authorization of Congress.”). Only those state court actions that could 14 have been originally filed in federal court may be removed. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a) (“Except as 15 otherwise expressly provided by Act of Congress, any civil action brought in a State court of which 16 the district courts of the United States have original jurisdiction, may be removed by the 17 defendant.”); see also, e.g., Caterpillar Inc. v. Williams, 482 U.S. 386, 392 (1987) (“Only state-court 18 actions that originally could have been filed in federal court may be removed to federal court by 19 defendant.”). Accordingly, the removal statute provides two basic ways in which a state court action 20 may be removed to federal court: (1) the case presents a federal question, or (2) the case is between 21 citizens of different states. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1441(a), (b). It falls upon the defendant to show the basis 22 for federal jurisdiction. Nishimoto v. Federman-Bachrach & Assoc., 903 F.2d 709, 712 (9th Cir.
 23 1990). Removal jurisdiction statutes are strictly construed against removal. Shamrock Oil & Gas 24 Corp. v. Sheets, 313 U.S. 100, 108 (1941).

25 The Notice of Removal filed in this action relies on the presence of a federal question in the 26 FAC. See Docket Item No. 1, at ¶ 12. When that is the case, the court looks to the face of a well-27 pleaded complaint to determine whether a cause of action is created by federal law or whether the 28 plaintiff’s right to relief necessarily depends on the resolution of a substantial question of federal

1 law. Christianson v. Colt Indus. Operating Corp., 486 U.S. 800, 808 (citing Franchise Tax Bd. of 2 California v. Constr. Laborers Vacation Trust, 463 U.S. 1, 27-28 (1983)). “[I]t must be clear from 3 the face of the plaintiff’s well-pleaded complaint that there is a federal question.” Duncan v.
 4 Stuetzle, 76 F.3d 1480, 1485 (9th Cir. 1996). The complaint as it existed at time of removal dictates 5 whether removal jurisdiction is proper. Libhart, 592 F.2d at 1065.

6 In this case, the court construes the FAC as that was the operative pleading at the time of 7 removal. As Defendant points out, the FAC contains a recitation of allegations against Defendant 8 followed by a clarification that Plaintiff is “seeking monetary relief and punitive damages under 9 Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.” See RJN at Ex. 4. He also directly quotes two provisions 10 of 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a). Id. Those references to federal statutes are the only legal citations in the 11 FAC and appear to be more than incidental notation. See Easton v. Crossland Mortg. Corp., 114 12 F.3d 979, 982 (9th Cir. 1997) (“[T]he mere reference of a federal statute in a pleading will not 13 convert a state law claim into a federal cause of action...”). Although the actual allegations are not 14 organized by distinct causes of action, putting the statutory citation together with the facts alleged 15 demonstrates that Plaintiff intended to bring a claim for unlawful employment practices under 42 16 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1). In addition, both the monetary and punitive damages sought by Plaintiff are 17 potential remedies for claims brought under Title VII. 42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b)(1); Kolstad v. Am.
 18 Dental Ass’n, 527 U.S. 526, 529 (1999). Thus, under the current state of the pleadings, a federal 19 question does appear on the face of the FAC. This forms the basis of federal jurisdiction.

20 In the Notice of Opposition, Plaintiff makes two arguments in support of his request to 21 remand. Neither are convincing. First, Plaintiff claims Defendant violated certain state laws, 22 including the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (“FEHA”), and California Government
 23 Code § 11135 et. seq., as well as portions of the California Constitution. See Not. of Oppo. at p. 7.
 24 The court interprets this statement Plaintiff’s representation that he meant to plead only violations of 25 California law. It is true that Plaintiff, as the master of his action, may decide the body of law he 26 will rely upon when federal and state authorities coincide. See Pan American Petro. Corp. v. Super.
 27 Ct., 366 U.S. 656, 662-63 (1961) (stating that “the party who brings a suit is master to decide what 28 law he will rely upon.”). But what Plaintiff cannot do is make that choice in the FAC and then

1 attempt to recharacterize federal claims as pure state claims to fit within a motion to remand. Cf.
 2 Sparta Surgical Corp. v. Nat'l Ass'n of Sec. Dealers, 159 F.3d 1209, 1213 (“[J]urisdiction must be 3 analyzed on the basis of the pleadings filed at the time of removal without reference to subsequent 4 amendments.”). Plaintiff could have avoided the prospect of a federal forum by relying exclusively 5 on state law in the FAC. Caterpillar, 482 U.S. at 392. He instead specifically relied on federal 6 statutes. Unfortunately for Plaintiff, such reliance is fatal to this argument.

7 Finally, Plaintiff believes the removal was untimely based on 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b). The 8 pertinent portion of that subsection states:

9 If the case stated by the initial pleading is not removable, a notice of 10 removal may be filed within thirty days after receipt by the defendant, 11 through service or otherwise, of a copy of an amended pleading, 12 motion, order or other paper from which it may first be ascertained 13 that the case is one which is or has become removable, except that a 14 case may not be removed on the basis of jurisdiction conferred by 15 section 1332 of this title [28 USCS § 1332] more than 1 year after 16 commencement of the action.

17 Here, Plaintiff's initial form complaint did not contain reference to a federal statute. See 18 RJN at Ex. 1. For this reason, the state court action was not immediately removable to this court as 19 there was no other basis for federal jurisdiction. However, this action did become removable when 20 Plaintiff clarified his federal claim by filing and serving the FAC on March 17, 2011. See RJN at 21 Ex. 4. Defendants then filed the Notice of Removal on April 14, 2011 - within the thirty day period 22 provided by § 1446(b). As such, the removal of this action from state court was timely based on the 23 amended pleading establishing federal jurisdiction. See Harris v. Bankers Life & Cas. Co., 425 F.3d 24 689, 694-95 (9th Cir. 2005). The portion of § 1446(b) cited by Plaintiff which prohibits removal of 25 an action more than one year after its commencement applies only to cases establishing federal 26 jurisdiction through diversity, as evidenced by the presence of 28 U.S.C. § 1332 in the statute. That 27 limitation does not apply to this action invoking federal question jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 28 1331. See Docket Item No. 1, at ¶ 12.

29 In light of the preceding discussion, the court finds that Defendant met its burden to 30 demonstrate the basis for federal jurisdiction. Plaintiff's arguments in favor of remand to the 31 Superior Court fail. The court will therefore deny the Motion.

III. ORDER

Based on the foregoing, the hearing scheduled for August 12, 2011, is VACATED.

Plaintiff's Motion to Remand is DENIED.
